ICTS First Aid Courses

As per The Health and Safety (First-Aid) Regulations 1981, employers should provide adequate and appropriate equipment and enough trained first aiders to help injured or sick staff. It is up to an employer to assess their first-aid requirements and to establish what first aid provision is needed, depending on number of employees, size, location and type of work.

ICTS has a strong training ethic, with a team of specialist First Aid trainers who deliver courses up and down the country, both to ICTS staff and to our broad Client base.

First Aid courses offered by ICTS:

- First Aid at Work (three days) / Requalification (two days)
- Emergency First Aid at Work (one day)
- Appointed Persons First Aid Course
- Half Day Annual Refresher Course
- Basic Life Support Training Course
- Automated External Defibrillation

"It is crucial that our teams are equipped with knowledge and are ready to react and help in times of need. As a community and, especially in our line of business, it is our duty to be able to assist and offer our support to the emergency services in times of crisis. For this reason, our training is to a very high standard," said Alan Dutt, Executive Director of Business Assurance, ICTS UK & Ireland.

In May/June 2017, ICTS has trained staff based at its contract sites at Bristol and Manchester Airports, Amazon and the City of Westminster College. Staff employed directly by the City of Westminster College and Bristol Airport were also in attendance.