

ICTS UK & Ireland and Ward Security Canine teams working in partnership in support of the City of London Crime Prevention Association

On Friday, 24 January 2020, the ICTS UK & Ireland Canine security team, along with industry colleagues from Ward Security, attended Saddlers' Hall for the first City of London Crime Prevention Association (CoLCPA) meeting of 2020. This was the first of a series of events which sees both companies working together to offer security support to some of London's iconic Livery Halls at which the CoLCPA meetings will be held.

Ashley Fernandes, Managing Partner of ICTS Consult and a member of the CoLCPA Committee commented, "It was great to see the Canine divisions from both Ward and ICTS working together, providing an additional layer of security support to London's prestigious Livery Halls. A fantastic example of the collaborative approach that brings so much value to our Industry and the individuals whose safety and security we are responsible for."

Canine detection services are widely recognised as a rapidly emerging resource within the security community. With an ability to effectively detect the smallest traces of explosives or contraband, easily deployable in any environment and delivering a proven increase in customer satisfaction and reassurance, canine detection teams are now widely utilised.

All ICTS specialist search dog handlers and their dogs are trained and accredited to the National Police Chiefs Council (NPCC) standard and are working towards the new Home Office National Canine Training and Accreditation Scheme (NCTAS), attending training at Regional Police Dog Training Centres or at the Defence Animal Centre in Melton Mowbray.
